THE WIDOWS

This Sunday we have two stories about widows: one from the prophet Elijah and the other from Jesus himself.

In the Old Testament (and in many cultures even today) a widow had no real value; she had no rights, she had no one to defend her, practically she was left behind and marginalized in society.

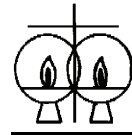

At the same time, because the widow had no one to protect her, God Himself took charge to provide and defend the widow. Many times widows were called to serve at the temple; many times, if they had no children, they would devote themselves to works of charity either for their family or for their neighbors. The widow was considered with respect, even though legally and socially she had no value.

It is exactly to a widow that the prophet Elijah is going for help. First, he asks for a glass of water, and then even for a piece of bread. The widow is a generous woman, because she is ready to give the prophet what he had requested; however, being a very poor woman with only a little boy, she was ready to give all that she had to the prophet. In view of her generosity, the prophet is moved and promises that the oil and the bread would never be lacking from her house.

At the same time, Jesus points out to the disciples that the poor widow who had put into the Temple treasury the few coins she had, was more generous than the rich people who were putting in more money; she had given all she had, while the rich people were giving out of their surplus, which did not cost them anything anyway.

Mother Theresa used to say: Love to be love must hurt! Real love is ready to sacrifice even what is necessary to one's life. Real love is when it is accompanied by sacrifice. No sacrifice, no love.

In the early church, there was an "ordo" of widows as much as there was an "ordo" of virgins; they were supported by the Christian community and they were dedicating the rest of their lives to the community. It was almost like a religious order, guided and governed by the bishop. Even in our days we see many widows who spend the rest of their days in service to God and the community. As in the time of Jesus, the temple relies a lot on the generosity of the widows.
